

You're In Charge®

WealthProtection ExpertiseSM

Conversation starters

Tips for discussing long-term care planning with your clients

Not a deposit	Not FDIC insured	May go down in value
Not insured by any federal government agency
Not guaranteed by any bank or savings association

The Lincoln National Life Insurance Company
Lincoln Life & Annuity Company of New York

1212008

For agent or broker use only.
Not for use with the public.

Conversation starters for discussing long-term care planning with your clients

The need for long-term care planning continues to grow, even as most consumers would prefer to think “it won’t happen to me.” The simple truth is that more consumers need to accept that long-term care planning isn’t just about them—it’s about their loved ones. Addressing this important gap in their financial planning can help clients maintain their independence, even in a compromised health condition, and make a hard situation easier for their family.

Engaging in long-term care planning can also lead to more satisfied and loyal clients. This can help you build connections with heirs to create a multi-generation client base. But it can also be an uncomfortable topic for clients—and for you. That’s why we’ve provided two approaches, one emotional and one financial, that can help ease the conversation with your clients.

The emotional approach

What to discuss

Do your clients have a family member or friend who’s had a long-term care experience?

If yes, have them share their perspective in that experience.

- Who was it?
- Did they stay at home? Use a visiting nurse? Did they enter a facility?
- Who cared for them?
- Who paid for it?
- What was the impact on their spouse or family?

If not, ask what they think of when they hear “long-term care.”

- Explain to them what it is and paint a picture of what long-term care is today.
 - Long-term care criteria
 - Can be an accident or a disease
 - Lots of choices – in-home, nursing home

Why this technique works

If clients don’t have a personal example to share, it’s the perfect opening to explain what long-term care is, and how it can make an impact on a family.

And if they do have experience with long-term care, they are primed for the conversation. Long-term care is a very personal experience, and seeing a family member or friend deal with a compromised health condition is a great motivator to ensure their own plans are secure.

What to discuss

Ask them to tell you about their family.

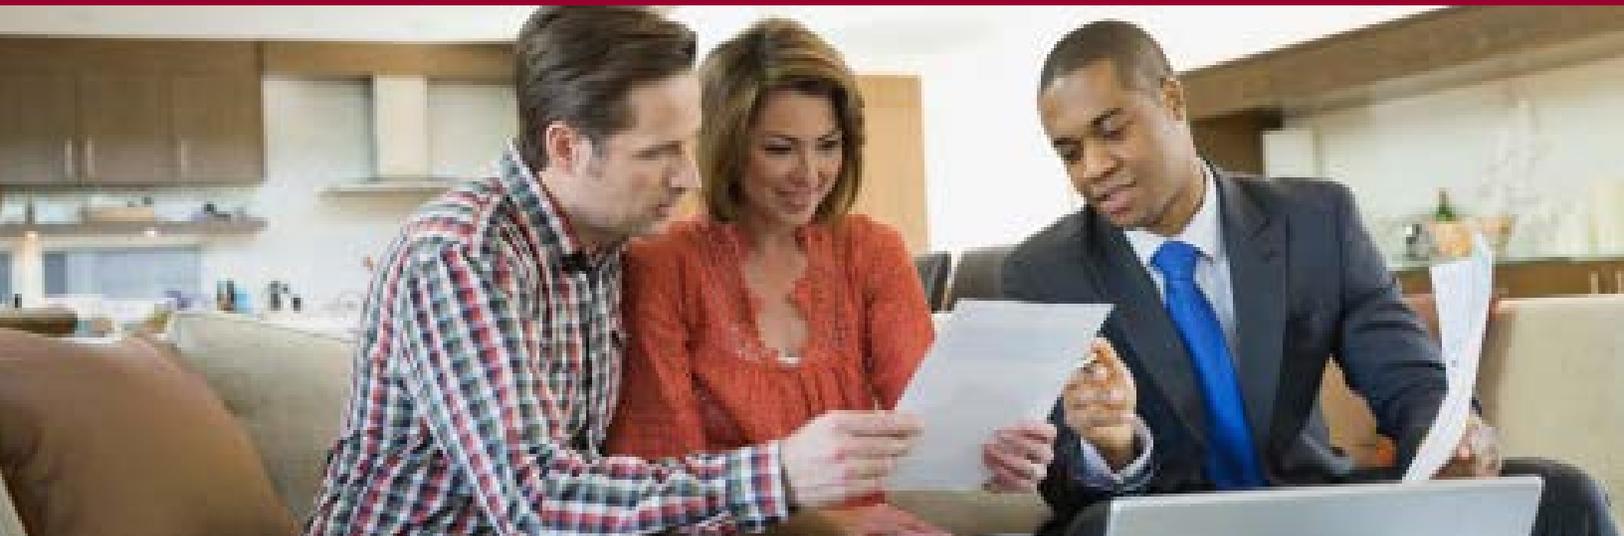

Why this technique works

Many clients plan to rely on family for help when a compromised condition arises. It’s a natural first step, and doesn’t have the same cost as a more formal nursing care situation. It’s important for clients and their families to understand the true impact of family care. So start a discussion of how a long-term care situation can play out, and the impact that it could have on the entire family.

- Does the family live close enough to realistically help with day-to-day needs?
- Do they want to put their spouse or family in a situation to have to help?
 - A spouse taking care of his or her ill or disabled spouse is six times more likely to suffer from depression or anxiety than normal.
 - It’s estimated that the financial impact to working caregivers tending to their parents can be $300,000 or more in lost income, benefits, and 401(k) matches
- Will family members be physically able to provide help?
- For spouses:

Assuming a similar age, will he or she be fit enough in a few years to lift your client or provide proper care?
- For adult children:

Assuming children live close enough, will they have the availability and interest in taking time from their own careers, raising a family, or other interests? How will providing care affect their own financial goals?

Part of a balanced planning approach

What to discuss

What do your clients' long-term care plans look like?

What assets will your clients use to pay for long-term care?

What to discuss

It gets right to the point. As an advisor, part of your role is identifying gaps in clients' plans for the future. Long-term care needs can have an enormous impact on savings, depleting retirement dollars by an advisor-estimated 2 to 3 times faster than intended.

This line of questioning assumes that clients accept the likelihood of a long-term care need, and will want a plan in place. You just need to help them afford it.

What to discuss

If your clients need long-term care, what kind of care would they want?

What to discuss

This approach addresses the independence most clients want to maintain, even with compromised health. No one wants to think that they will need long-term care. But 70% of those ages 65 and older will need this kind of care at some point.¹

Show them the value of planning now. Creating a plan that addresses long-term care costs may:

- Help protect wealth from long-term care expenses
- Help allow clients to control the quality of care they receive
- Allow family to be care managers, not care providers

¹Source: U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, "Medicare & You 2015," www.Medicare.gov/www/medicare.gov/Pubs/pdf/10050.pdf, revised December 2014.

*Lincoln Financial Group and Hanover Research, "Managing Long-term Care Risks," October 2014 <https://www.lfg.com/LincolnPageServer?LFGPage=/lfg/lfgclient/rna/rsrch/index.html>.

Why talk to clients about long-term health costs?

- Fewer than 1 in 4 consumers are confident that they will have the resources to pay for long-term care.*
- Consumers who address a broader range of wealth planning topics with their advisors express much higher levels of satisfaction, with an 86% satisfaction rate given to advisors who discussed 7 or more such topics.*
- Consumers who address a broader range of topics with their advisors own more financial products.*
- It's a huge opportunity to deepen the relationship with the entire family. Industry estimates indicate that over 70% of widows change advisors when their husbands pass away.

Put Lincoln Wealth Protection
Expertise to work for you.
Call 855-831-7067, or visit
WealthProtectionExpertise.com.

The value of partnering with Lincoln Financial Group

Lincoln Financial Group delivers sophisticated strategies and products for the creation, protection, and enjoyment of wealth. We are committed to helping Americans plan for retirement, prepare for the unexpected and protect their wealth from five key financial challenges: taxes, long-term health costs, longevity, inflation, and market risk.

Rely on Lincoln for the knowledge and experience to help you address these challenges. Lincoln Wealth Protection Expertise combines state-of-the-art products, seasoned wholesalers and specialists, and powerful visualization tools to assist you in protecting client wealth and planning financial outcomes.

Not a deposit
Not FDIC-insured
Not insured by any federal government agency
Not guaranteed by any bank or savings association
May go down in value

©2015 Lincoln National Corporation

LincolnFinancial.com

Lincoln Financial Group is the marketing name for Lincoln National Corporation and its affiliates.

Affiliates are separately responsible for their own financial and contractual obligations.

LCN-1212008-060215
XXX 6/15 Z01

Order code: MG-STRY-FLI001

You're In Charge®

Lincoln has over 25 years of experience in the hybrid long-term care market. We have professionals, presentations, and powerful visualization tools to assist you in having successful long-term care planning discussions with your clients.

For more information, contact your Lincoln representative.

Important disclosures:

This material was prepared to support the promotion and marketing of variable annuity and life insurance products. Lincoln Financial Group® affiliates, their distributors, and their respective employees, representatives, and/or insurance agents do not provide tax, accounting, or legal advice. Any tax statements contained herein were not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, for the purpose of avoiding U.S. federal, state, or local tax.

For agent or broker use only. Not for use with the public.