American National Group makes Forbes Best Insurance Companies List for 2024

One of the best testaments to showing that a company is truly making a difference with its clients is the recognition of its efforts from an outside reputable source. Recently, American National Group was listed by Forbes as one of “America’s Best Insurance Companies 2024.”

“We’re honored to once again be recognized among the best insurance companies in America,” said Josh Feyissa, EVP & Chief Operating Officer, American National. “This is a testament to how hard our employees and distribution partners work every day to understand and exceed our clients’ expectations.”

Forbes collaborated with Statista, a market-research firm, in developing its list of the top 90 insurance companies in the United States.

About 4,200 insurance companies that sold life insurance and annuity products, property and casualty coverage, and/or health insurance were part of the Forbes’ survey.

The list was compiled from customer satisfaction and an evaluation of the companies’ performance. The survey included 16,000 responses of customers from across the country. The participants rated the companies based on eight metrics, including overall satisfaction and their willingness to recommend the company to family and friends. The companies were also graded on financial advice, customer service, price/performance ratio, transparency, and the damage/benefit ratio to help with the team’s assessments.
